THEATERS

Before a house which filled every seat, the Neill Company on Saturday evening presented in a manner most acceptable to the audience, Charles Coghlan's piece, "The Royal Box." In the varying moods which harry the poetic soul of Clarence, Mr. Neill showed to good advantage, though through the presentation there was a strain which was not as true to nature as is the case when the company presents such a piece as "The Jilt," for instance.

"The Royal Box" is a play which has stood the test of time under one name or another, and has in it many things which call for a high order of talent. The part of Clarence is one which runs the gamut, the comedy and the dramatic, even the melo-dramatic, being in close juxtaposition, so close often that the lines touch and throw the actor's conceptions out of perspective. Neill was at his best in the scenes with Countess Helen. With Miss Pryse he was not natural, though his declamation of the appeal to abandon her idea of taking to the stage, was well done. His Romeo, under stress of high feeling, lacked the intensity given to it by others who have essayed the part, but the close of the scene, where he denounces his royal patron, was strong, well conceived, and won for the star and company several recalls.

Miss Chapman was not given as happy a role in the piece as her hard and conscientious work deserves. She was a natural Celia, but there is not in the part the spontaneity which is so grateful to the actress. The work of MacVicar as the Prince was well balanced, and showed a side of the versatile actor which pleased his friends. Miss Forbes was a pretty Juliet, and spoke her lines with care, and acted the little scene with discretion. There was a fairly balanced cast, and the appreciation of the audience was constantly shown in the impartial applause which was in evidence during the entire evening.

HOGAN'S GOOD HOUSES.

There was a packed house at the performance of Hogan and his troupe in the Orpheum Saturday night. Hogan is enjoyed by nearly everybody in Honolulu, and in his audience were representatives of all the classes and various nationalities of this cosmopolitan town. The fun was fast and furious, everyone enjoyed himself, and laughter and applause repeatedly shook the house, especially when Hogan or any of the other performers gave vent to some Hawaiian word or phrase. Hogan is preparing some local hits for use in his songs.

NIOBE.

The funniest play in the entire Neill series is "Niobe," which will be given by Mr. Neill and his company tomorrow evening. It is really the story of "Pygmalion and Galatea" revised in its most amusing form, and is from the pens of Harry and Edward Paulson, and described on the program as a "fantastic comedy in three acts." Miss Edythe Chapman will be seen as Niobe and Mr. Neill as Peter Amos Dunn. The scenes are laid at the home of the latter, in New York city. The cast will be as follows:

Peter Amos Dunn.....Mr. Neill
Cornelius Griffin.....Robert Morris
Jefferson Tompkins.....Frank MacVicar
Phineas Innings.....George Bloomquist
Parker Slix.....John W. Burton
Servant.....Scott Seaton
Niobe.....Edythe Chapman
Caroline Dunn.....Lucille Spiney
Hattie Griffin.....Julia Dean
Helen Griffin.....Lillian Andrews
Madeline Mifflon.....Louis Brownell
Beatrice Slix.....Mary Elizabeth Forbes

P. L. WEAVER LOSES BOAT

Supposed to Have Been Stolen.
What Fell Into the Police
Drag Net.

P. L. Weaver has informed the police that on or about Nov. 9 a skiff belonging to him was stolen from its moorings near the Heanani Yacht and Boat House. The missing boat is 12 feet long and painted slate color; it has two seats and two sets of locks. It was built by Captain Johnson, and purchased by Weaver, who formerly used it as a tender to his yacht Spray.

The boat's identifying marks consist of a square cut oarlock in the stern, made for sculling purposes, while on the port side near the stern a piece has been gouged out of the side.

The following cases were disposed of by Judge Wilcox in the District Court on Saturday:

Nadriao, heedless driving, Nov. 25; Kun Lung, carriage regulations, reprimanded and discharged; Ah Hei, che fa, $30 and costs; Ah Lu, che fa, reprimanded and discharged; Simamoto, Usudo, affray, $5 and costs; Arimit, driving a dray faster than a walk, $5 and costs; J. Snow, F. C. Loomer, H. Bell, drunkenness, bail forfeited; M. Gonsale, vagrancy, two months; Chas. Makolu, assault and battery on M. Kahaloa (w), 19 days; Peter Larsen, gross cheat, three months.

The arrests for Saturday and Sunday included:
Ah Lung, leaving horse untied; Welan, vagrancy; thirteen Chinese, gambling; Amona, L. Torbert, Kalua, D. Ferreira, J. Kaluna, M. Perry, M. Silva, C. Bolton, gambling; Mookana, Kosa, Friday, Cheong Fong, gambling; N. Kaluhaia, Sakai, vagrancy; J. W. Pollock, drunkenness; Vincent, assault and battery; G. Smith, drunkenness.
